Learning goals:

1. To be able to describe and understand the major concepts of foundational theories of helping.
2. To generate a reflective journal. This course seeks to prepare you to engage in some basics of interviewing in the belief that it is critical to take theory directly into practice. Instructions for the journal are presented in the syllabus.
3. To describe and understand some basics of family counseling. This course states the individual develops in a family in a cultural context. An understanding of all three dimensions are vital for effective individual, family, or group counseling.
4. To describe and understand history, philosophy, and current trends in school counseling.
5. To develop an ethically and multiculturally aware understanding of the field. Ethics, which includes multicultural and gender sensitivity, must undergird both course presentations, your practice exercises, and later your own professional work.
6. To develop a sense of empirical research associated with each of the counseling theories and implications for best-practices. In addition, to understand what current trends suggest about future work in both counseling and school counseling fields.
7. To develop a sense of a consultation framework from which to understand and practice consultation.

Course catalog description:

Presents different theoretical orientations and in doing so, extends knowledge of theoretical aspects of counseling. Students explore their theoretical approach and relevant techniques.

Other description of course purposes, context, methods, etc:

We face a time in counseling where the history of cultural oppression needs to be reviewed. Counseling has in many ways operated without awareness of a multicultural and systems context and there is much change that needs to occur. To this end, a key purpose of this course is to participate in a re-conceptualized profession of helping.

Counseling is also moving rapidly toward new conceptions of theory and intervention, much of which is conducted outside the traditional "clinical office" and instead in schools and community settings. This course is designed to introduce you to, not only some of the key theoretical and practical applications of counseling, but also to provide you with specific alternatives for working with a variety of clients. In addition, as school counselors, the course will present an overview of the philosophy and history of the school counseling profession. As the course progresses, current trends in school counseling as well as future directions the field appears to be taking will be reviewed.

Developing one's own integration of counseling theory will remain important in the future, but we are also finding that certain types of intervention are likely to be more effective than others with some clients. As such we have a responsibility to learn interventions and theories that are not always comfortable for us. We may not always practice these methods but we need to know enough about them to make intelligent referrals. In addition, the course will provide a general framework for practicing and understanding consultation.

In this course you are encouraged to explore alternative perspectives on the truth. You are encouraged to generate your own construction of the counseling process. At the same time, you are asked to respect and understand the constructions and worldview of people different from you.

The class format is divided into two parts: lecture/discussion and role-play skill-building activities. All classes will involve active participation from students.

Grading policy: Students receive a letter grade for the course.

Attendance. As this course will be highly experiential with practice exercises and only meets once a week, attendance at all sessions is crucial. A written request and corresponding approval from the instructor to miss any class is required in advance. Failure to do so will result in 3 points taken off the final grade.

Late paper policy. All papers (i.e., journal assignments, final paper) have an assigned due date as indicated. Please note that late papers will NOT be accepted.

Assignments¹:

1. Final paper. Please type or use a word processor for the final paper. Total amount of points for the final paper assignments is 40. A detailed description of the paper will be handed out in class.

2. Reflective Journal. The journal is an opportunity to share your reflections about the theories and approach used in class. A total of 6 journal writings will occur of the course of the semester. The class schedule indicates where there are specific assignments for journal writing, otherwise this is a space for you to write about your experience. Each Reflective Journal entry is worth 5 points for a total of 30 points.

3. Class participation/Skill building. This requirement is based on 1) your willingness to complete homework assignments; 2) demonstration of readings in class; and 3) ability to demonstrate significant skill as a counselor through skill-building activities. Skill building is worth 15 points.

4. Paper presentation. You will be given class time to present the key themes and critical issues presented in your paper. The paper presentation is worth 15 points.

Academic Integrity Policy:

The Office of Student Conduct supervises issues related to violations of academic integrity (see <http://academicintegrity.rutgers.edu>). Please familiarize yourself with the university policy on academic integrity at http://academicintegrity.rutgers.edu/files/documents/AI_Policy_2013.pdf

Office of Disability Services:

Rutgers University welcomes students with disabilities into all of the University's educational programs. In order to receive consideration for reasonable accommodations, a student with a disability must contact the appropriate disability services office at the campus where you are officially enrolled, participate in an intake interview, and provide documentation: <https://ods.rutgers.edu/students/documentation-guidelines>. If the documentation supports your request for reasonable accommodations, your campus's disability services office will provide you with a Letter of Accommodations. Please share this letter with your instructors and discuss the accommodations with them as early in your courses as possible. To begin this process, please complete the Registration form on the ODS web site at: <https://ods.rutgers.edu/students/registration-form>.
